

PowerPoint Practice Project

Here we are at the last project in the computer skills section of PROTEC. Bravo - you've come a long way!

I hope that you enjoyed watching the PowerPoint tutorials. Many of you have probably made slide shows before. But I do hope that you learned some new tricks and tips. Most importantly, it's important that you learned how not to overwhelm your audience with too much text if you plan to talk or too many animations. So, definitely have some fun, but don't overdo it.

For this final project, I'd like you to make a PowerPoint slide show with a minimum of ten slides. Please be sure to include a slide transition that you apply to all the slides and some kind of content animation. The animation can be on just a single slide ... or many of them. I'll leave that up to you. I'd also like to see at least one image and one bulleted list. More than one is fine, too!

So – what feels like a fun project for you?

- A slide show for your family showing a collection of old photos?
- A presentation to celebrate your soon-to-be-5-year-old's birthday?
- A presentation that explains to your next employer why you are perfect for that job?
- A sales pitch to customers for your new product?

You can use one of those ideas, or come up with something totally different. I really hope that you can have a good time with this. Feel free to test your skills – especially with something you have not done before.

No need to send me an explanatory Word document. I'm sure I'll be able to tell by the presentation itself why you chose it!

And ... again ...

HAVE FUN!!
